ASHRAE Puget Sound Chapter Punch List

Volume 44, Number 10

August 2009

--SPECIAL SUMMER EDITION--

Join us for a Summer Tour of the

Naturally Ventilated Terry Thomas Office Building

Until April 2008, it had been decades since a Class A office building was constructed without mechanical cooling in the Puget Sound region. The award-winning 40,000 square foot Terry Thomas building is cooled by passive ventilation. Join Puget Sound Chapter for a tour of this high-performance building on a warm summer day. The tour begins with a 30-minute presentation by mechanical design team member Michael Hedrick of Stantec and architects from Weber Thompson.

A "2009 What Makes It Green" award winner from the Seattle Committee on the Environment (COTE), the building has received LEED Gold Certification for Core and Shell as well as LEED Platinum Certification for Commercial Interiors. Members of the Stantec design team, Michael Hedrick, Thom Marseille, Long Lam, and Amarpreet Sethi, received first place in Puget Sound Chapter's 2009 Technology Awards for their contributions to the Terry Thomas building.
