Environmental health involves understanding hazards in our homes and communities, and preventing them from harming our health.

Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department was awarded a grant from the Environmental Protection Agency to find out what environmental health issues are most important to county residents, and what we should do about them.

Pierce County Coalition for Environmental Health Priorities workgroups will meet monthly in 3 areas of Pierce County: Tacoma, Gig Harbor/Key Peninsula, and Eastern Pierce County. Workgroup members will:

- Share environmental health concerns and information
- Decide which environmental health issues are most important
- Develop action plans for what we should do about these issues

We would like the workgroups to include people from all walks of life, to make sure we understand and consider a wide range of issues and solutions. Incentives such as gift cards and food will be provided to workgroup members in appreciation of their time and work.

If you would you like to be part of a workgroup, please answer the questions on the back of this flyer and return it to Marianne Seifert. Or fill out an application online at www.tpchd.org/ehpriorities.
